The Reuter Pipe Organ, Opus 2222

The people of Grace are filled with joy and gratitude for this gift in praise of our Lord! The long-awaited pipe organ, which will lead the musical portions of our worship services, adds beauty to the chancel area and uplifts our spirits as we sing hymns and anthems to God. The façade was designed by Tom Cashen with woodwork symbolizing the Methodist flame and cross. The grillwork pattern gets larger toward the center, and the visible pipes are arranged so that our eyes are drawn to a flamed copper cross with Celtic circle. The cross is framed by light and dark wood trim. The rest of the façade, as well as all the wood finishes and furniture in the chancel, are done in the two contrasting colors of “gold caramel” and “red mahogany.” The three manual console, which is moveable, is made of white oak and black walnut. The organ has 2,441 pipes which make up the 41 ranks and 33 stops. Praise the Lord with the organ!

Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary Organ Program

For over ten years, Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary, a seminary of the United Methodist Church located on the Northwestern University campus in Evanston, Illinois, has offered a Master of Arts in Music Ministry degree, providing academic and professional preparation for music leadership and ministry in the worship life of the church.

As was announced in The American Organist last spring, the seminary began offering a concentration in organ performance this fall after Northwestern University decided to discontinue its program in organ and church music. There is no comparable program for graduate study in the Chicago metropolitan area, nor is there a seminary-based program in this part of the Midwest.

The two-year program is designed to help students begin to reflect critically on the practice of music and its place in the liturgical life of the church; continue to develop skills in service playing and accompanying, organ, choral conducting, voice, piano, or other instruments; come to know, understand, and interpret personal knowledge of God through personal and communal prayer, worship, and service. Through a reciprocal agreement, students are also able to take courses in voice, conducting, and composition at Northwestern and courses related to the Episcopal liturgy at Seabury-Western Theological Seminary. Margaret Kemper currently works with the organ students in private instruction as well as with course work in organ literature.

The program at Garrett-Evangelical provides the academic and professional preparation for music leadership and ministry in the worship life of the church. It also provides the academic qualifications for certification in music ministry and for ordination as a deacon in The United Methodist Church. This degree is also appropriate for persons of most Protestant denominations who are serving or will serve as organists or directors of music in local churches.

For more information about the program, please contact the program's director, Dr. E. Byron Anderson, at 847-866-3875 or at Ron.Anderson@garrett.edu. For other information about the degree programs at Garrett-Evangelical, visit the seminary website at www.garrett.edu.

The free-will offering received this afternoon will be given to support this program.

The Reuter Organ Company Opus 2222 · Grace United Methodist Church, Naperville, Illinois

Since its founding in Trenton, Illinois, some 88 years ago and relocation to Lawrence, Kansas, in 1919, The Reuter Organ Company has grown into one of the country's leading and most respected pipe organ builders, with a highly skilled and dedicated workforce of craftspeople, designing and constructing instruments in a state-of-the-art manufacturing and corporate complex – the largest new building project for a major pipe organ builder in the last 50 years. The firm, which in its first year of business in 1917 had but a single $1,800 contract, has become an international concern with organs in Canada, Taiwan, Korea and nearly every U.S. state. The first Reuter organ is still playing today in Mattoon, Illinois. Since that first installation, Reuter has created over 2,200 new instruments for cathedrals, churches, chapels, schools, synagogues, concert halls, theaters and residences. These many different stories are a mosaic of American musical and religious life and one company's role in that heritage. The pieces come together in the Reuter Organ Company of today: a pipe organ builder compelled by a singular unwavering vision – to craft the best the industry has to offer, dedicated to artistry and integrity, and built to the Glory of God.

Tonal direction at Reuter is driven by a conscious effort to gain an understanding of a particular church music program as it relates to worship – this work is done with an appreciation of the acoustics and architecture of the liturgical space – and the project at Grace United Methodist Church is a fine example. Working with consultant Scott Riedel, the committee was able to make early determinations about what would be required for a pipe organ installation to be successful. When Reuter joined the group as the builder of choice, those expectations were discussed. Given those considerations, the committee, consultant and Reuter were able to decide on an appropriate course of action designed to achieve the artistic results everyone wanted. This work shows what is possible in a partnership between church and builder when a well-informed musical decision makes creative and efficient use of available resources. When cooperation and collaboration define an organ project, the results are dramatic.

We hope you enjoy getting to know this wonderful instrument. The addition of such an organ to the worship experience is sure to “turn some heads.” Congregational song will become more enthusiastic, the message more meaningful. Overall you will see the music is communicated more effectively as the organ itself becomes acclimated and the other musicians get used to it. It won't be long, though, until the sounds emanating from the sanctuary before or after church will seem like home, as if they were designed especially for this space. And really, they were. This instrument is unique. Just as your congregation and building have no other match, so, too, this organ becomes a part of this special place and the worshiping life of Grace United Methodist Church.

Finally, thank you to the committee and staff at Grace United Methodist Church. We are honored you invested your trust in us, and we hope the results will pay rich dividends for many years to come. Welcome to the Reuter family.
